Minutes after Myjoyonline.com reported a possible gaffe by the US Embassy in the ongoing bill banter with the Electricity Company of Ghana (ECG), the Embassy has responded with a tweet insisting it is still indebted to the ECG.

"We stand by our May 17 statement. We continue to work w/ ECG to obtain correct bills that will allow us to pay for our electricity." The Embassy tweeted.

Sara Stealy

When Myjoyonline.com contacted the Embassy its spokesperson Sara Stealy said it could not confirm whether or not James Asangnia is an employee of the Embassy and will also not confirm the existence of the email.

She said the only person or persons charged with the responsibility of speaking for the Embassy is the Director of Public Affairs or the Ambassador himself.

But Myjoyonline.com can confirm that James Asangnia is indeed an employee caught in the middle of controversy between the ECG and the Embassy.

Total Debt on account:

29,940.20

It is not clear yet why the Embassy will insist on owing the ECG when receipts intercepted by Myjoyonline.com indicate that it has paid its debt to March 2017.

If at all the Embassy is indebted to the ECG, it is not clear how much but what is clear
